

Vermont Institute of Natural Science Annual Report 2012~2013

As a 501(c)(3) organization, VINS' mission is to motivate individuals and communities to care for the environment through education, research, and avian wildlife rehabilitation.

VINS Annual Report

April 1, 2012 ~ March 31, 2013

As VINS enters its fifth decade, we are looking forward to many exciting new programs and projects coming to fruition. Reflecting on the arc of the last forty years, we can see an important connection between two major events in our history. David Laughlin's investigation of pollution in the Ottauquechee River was the beginning point for VINS, fostered positive environmental change in our local area (with the river's eventual clean-up), and served as an inspiration to so many who have followed in David's footsteps.

And in our 40th year, VINS embarked on a similar, if more far-reaching, effort—to educate our ever-widening community about the effects of the changing climate on our region and our planet with an educational tool brand new to our organization. This fiscal year, in collaboration with the University of Delaware, VINS began work on the first of a series of four short films focusing on this climate transition and how we can become better informed about and better prepared for the events it causes. Tropical Storm Irene's effects on Vermont and the science behind the weather that caused it are the subjects of the first film (which is now complete and available for viewing).

The many accomplishments that tie these two milestones together are almost too many to enumerate, but they include, of course, our Environmental Learning for the Future education program, an integral part of VINS throughout its history. This storied VINS program taught thousands of Vermonters about the natural world. Our 40th year also marks VINS' transition to a new education program, better suited to the needs of the 21st century classroom. VINS' Naturalist-in-Residence (NiR) program is a collaborative venture between teachers and VINS educators to deepen inquiry-based science education in local schools. The program has already been instituted in several schools, and more are signing up regularly.

Other exciting accomplishments in FY2013 include another successful year for VINS Summer Nature Camp, bringing our fun-filled, educational, week-long summer programs to more children than ever before. Also in 2012, our Wildlife Services Department achieved great success in their highest ever release rate of birds under our care. And in a major addition to the Nature Center campus, we broke ground on VINS' first universally accessible, ADA/ABA-compliant nature trail. More on all of these events can be found in the Accomplishments section of this report.

All of these achievements happen because of your support. These projects, as well as our regular daily onsite and outreach programs, stay true to VINS' mission of motivating individuals and communities to care for the environment through education, research, and avian wildlife rehabilitation. In FY2013, VINS served more than 46,000 people from all over New England and beyond. These guests, students, and teachers have come to rely on VINS and the Nature Center to learn about raptors, other birds, and our environment, and to gain a respite from their day-to-day lives.

Our staff and board are continually inspired by the curiosity of our visitors, children and adults alike, as they discover the wonders of the natural world through the VINS Nature Center. VINS has been a reliable presence in the region for more than four decades now, but we are continually striving to keep all of our programming and facilities up-to-date and relevant to our mission and our audience. We do all of this solely from donations, admissions, and program fees (much of which is subsidized by grants). It is your support that makes this all possible.

Leading the Way in Environmental Education and Conservation

OUR MISSION

VINS is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization whose mission is to motivate individuals and communities to care for the environment through education, research, and avian wildlife rehabilitation.

OUR PRIORITY

Making high-quality, compelling, and fun environmental education programs and learning opportunities accessible to more people and communities.

OUR VISION

To promote and deliver integrated programs and services that are designed for a broad audience and address current ecological challenges. Specifically, VINS offers:

- An exceptional environmental education resource at the VINS Nature Center,
- conservation of our native bird populations through rehabilitation and education,
- creative collaboration with other organizations, and
- support for focused environmental research.

- VINS' Naturalist-in-Residence Program – This new education initiative entered its second full year with enough donor support to get the program established in several new schools, including Dothan Brook School, and the White River School, adding to the programs established at the Lyme Nursery School and the Ottauquechee School. The Naturalist-in-Residence program joins VINS' expertise and knowledge in the sciences with the teachers' and schools' goals for learning – VINS educators and the teachers are partners in designing the curriculum and in teaching the classes. Outdoor explorations and investigations stimulate students' innate curiosity while enhancing their classroom discoveries, exponentially expanding the learning environment and potential for students. This fleshing out of the sciences helps students make the connections that provide for a fuller and deeper sense of their environment and, ultimately, of themselves. The great demand for the program has our development staff working hard to raise the funding to assist all the schools who are eager to bring the NiR program to their students.
- The Ottauquechee Cooperative Invasive Species Management Area (OCISMA) team had another successful year. Headquartered at VINS, the Invasive Species Coordinator, Mandy Velia, and Hannah Putnam, VINS' School and Adult Programs Manager and OCISMA Chair, provided expert oversight and execution to the program. OCISMA is a watershed-wide volunteer organization committed to managing invasive species in the 223-square mile Ottauquechee River Watershed. The OCISMA steering committee includes representatives from the Silvio O. Conte National Fish and Wildlife Refuge, the Marsh-Billings-Rockefeller National Historic Park, the US Army Corps of Engineers, the Vermont Agency of Natural Resources, the Vermont Chapter of The Nature Conservancy, the Ottauquechee Natural Resources Conservation District, and Vermont invasive species pioneer Mike Bald. During the summer of 2012, OCISMA developed six working partnerships, educated hundreds of people about invasive species, and logged nearly 1,400 intern hours and 78 volunteer workdays removing European buckthorn, Eurasian water milfoil, dame's rocket, purple loosestrife, Japanese knotweed, and garlic mustard from 14 field sites along the Ottauquechee River and its tributaries.
- VINS Nature Camps – Our new Camp Coordinator, Kelly Beerman, brought her fresh perspective, dynamic energy, and love for nature education to the job and helped make the 2012 VINS Nature Camp season a great success, providing nature-themed adventures and education to 318 campers at five locations throughout Vermont and western New Hampshire. Kelly helped VINS not only in increasing enrollment but also by fostering great excitement and enthusiasm among the counselors, campers, and staff. VINS worked with several partners in offering a summer filled with hands-on environmental exploration for children in their communities. VINS' camp program partners included: Purple Crayon Productions in Woodstock, VT; Upper Valley Aquatic Center in White River Junction, VT; Storrs Pond Recreation Area in Hanover, NH; and AVA Art Center in Lebanon, NH. Thanks to generous donor, sponsor, and foundation support of our Nature Camps, VINS was able to provide 20% of its campers with partial or full scholarships totaling more than $13,000.
- Intern Program – The 2012 Intern team brought great knowledge, energy, and ideas to their six-month stays here at the Nature Center. Their work in VINS' Education and Wildlife Services departments helped us care for the season's many injured, ill, and orphaned birds and provide first-class environmental education to our onsite and outreach programs. Our team of ten interns includes one Americorps member each year.

A Community Resource for Wild Bird Care

- VINS Avian Wildlife Clinic – In 2012, our Wildlife Services Department staff provided much needed medical care for the 387 injured, orphaned, and ill birds brought to our clinic here at the Nature Center. All of this work was done, and has always been done at VINS over the Department's 35-year history, without cost to the public or government funding. And this year, our top-notch team was able to raise the release rate (the number of birds healed and returned to the wild) to 52%, up 14% from 2011 numbers, and up 13% over the previous five-year average. We're always very proud of our staff's efforts, but this increase is a significant testament to their dedication, professionalism, and resourcefulness. Thanks to the support of our donors, we also added a new waterfowl pool to our rehab area in order for staff to take in and care for these types of birds.
- Volunteers – The dedicated team of volunteers that help our Wildlife Services Department with the daily (unglamorous!) chores of caring for clinic birds, display birds, and education birds has never been better. In 2012, our 52 WLS volunteers logged more than 4,400 hours cleaning enclosures, feeding baby birds, and assisting in medical care. The value of their service to VINS and to the community is priceless, but if we were to estimate it, it would cost us nearly $100,000 to pay them for their work.

Planting the Seeds for Research

- The VINS Meadow – The VINS Wildflower Meadow, between the Nature Store and the Administration Building, received some major attention in 2012. Our Green Mountain College Research Intern Baxter Seguin spent the summer cataloging the plants and animals that live in and use the meadow during the growing season. After some analysis, it was determined that the site could benefit from some hands-on management to improve biodiversity. With this in mind, the soil was tilled, native wildflower seeds were sown, and the site was fertilized using organic material, namely Eurasian milfoil, an invasive aquatic plant previously harvested from Dewey's Pond, adjacent to the Nature Center. This was a perfect way to recycle the plants and add to the biodiversity of the site. We're looking forward to watching the new meadow emerge!
- The Last Irene – This past year, VINS embarked on a historic project in a whole new realm of education and research. With the collaborative assistance of Arctic sea-ice scientist Dr. Cathleen Geiger from the University of Delaware, climate science educator Peter Malsin, and filmmaker Teo Zagar, VINS received a $50,000 National Science Foundation grant to produce a pilot film on climate science. Using Tropical Storm Irene and its effects on Vermont in August 2011 as a starting point, the film focused on the emergence of a new paradigm in climate effects. Our long-term plan is to parlay this film into a series of documentaries on our changing environment, which will be made available to schools and other institutions, along with study guides. Stay tuned to our website and newsletter for screenings and other information.

Outdoors and Indoors at the Nature Center

- McKnight Trail – VINS broke ground on the first phase of a major project to revamp our existing trail system to enable universal access, based on ADA/ABA standards. The project began in the fall of 2012, under the guidance of John Taylor and Russell Hirschler from the Upper Valley Trails Alliance, and benefitted greatly from the many hours of volunteer labor generously provided by companies such as Hypertherm, schools such as Dartmouth College and the Sharon Academy, as well as many individuals. Woven into our network of trails that wind through the rich forest of the campus, this trail was constructed with gentle grades and a hard-packed surface to allow for easy and gentle walking and rolling. The 1/3-mile section, which opened in June of 2013, broadens the Nature Center experience for many more residents and out-of-state visitors with limited mobility who may have few options in the Upper Valley for accessible nature trails.
- Artist Exhibits – The VINS Nature Center once again played host to exhibitions by many local and regional artists, such as Douglas Aja, Steve Hamlin, Carrie Hayes, and Katherine Johnson. All of the exhibitors generously donated a portion of their sales to VINS. Adding this element of art to our science center echoes the focus of our education efforts, which incorporate learning from all disciplines to inform and enlighten all learners, young and old alike. Our exhibits show year-round—in the Neale Pavillion during the summer and in the Classroom the rest of the year.
- Nature Store – VINS visitors saw a lot of great new products come through the Nature Store this past year. The store is fast becoming the local go-to stop for nature-themed gifts, toys, games, books, jewelry, and apparel.

VINS' 40th birthday

- In a joint celebration of VINS' 40th anniversary and fellow Upper Valley nonprofit Opera North's 30th birthday, the two organizations held a special performance of an outdoor opera at the Nature Center in July with refreshments and a beautiful dinner. The Cunning Little Vixen featured junior members of the ON troupe and delighted visitors at this festive summer event. Opera North is the Northeast's premier summer opera festival, with a proud track record of presenting high-quality productions in the intimacy of the 710-seat Lebanon Opera House, as well as other locations in the Upper Valley, and of serving as a career launching pad for Young Artists.
- On October 21, 2012, VINS officially celebrated its 40th birthday with a public event as 350 visitors joined us at the Nature Center. On hand were many Board of Trustee and Board of Advisor members, as well as many other people who have figured prominently in VINS' long history as supporters, volunteers, and friends. We were honored to have so many celebrate this milestone of VINS' history.

Community Involvement

- Irene-related events in August 2012 – Continuing our commitment to helping the local community recover from the devastating effects of Tropical Storm Irene, VINS played host to several events in August of 2012. These included lectures about the science behind the event by Lesley-Anne Dupigny-Giroux, the Vermont State Climatologist and UVM Professor, and Marie Levesque Caduto, the Agency of Natural Resources Watershed Coordinator for southeastern Vermont. VINS also hosted an event conducted by Starting Over Strong Vermont (SOS-VT), which included activities for children and discussions for adults focused on emotional recovery from traumatic events, as well as emergency-preparedness information.

VINS' Members are the bedrock for the programs and services we offer. From environmental education and outreach to wild bird rehabilitation and research support, our loyal members make VINS' important work possible. For more information, go to: www.vinsweb.org/membership.

VINS' Adopt a Raptor Program is a special opportunity to support our care and rehabilitation of injured avian wildlife, a service we provide at no cost to the public. Adopting one of our resident raptors underwrites the specialized care our expert staff provides all the animals at the VINS Nature Center. For more information, go to: www.vinsweb.org/adopt.

Donations from loyal supporters like you are another vital component of our funding base. From regularly scheduled and one-time cash gifts to bequests of stock and property, and legacy giving, VINS' Development team works closely with all of our donors to ensure their philanthropic vision is respected and accommodated. For more information, go to: www.vinsweb.org/donate.

If you'd prefer to speak with someone about your interest in giving to VINS, contact Jonathan Tuthill, Director of Development, at jtuthill@vinsweb.org or 802.359.5001, ext. 220.
