In Retrospect

by Charles F. Rattigan

In sum, 2014-2015 could aptly be characterized by one word, “change.” This year marks one of enrichment and expansion of educational programming, as well as positive, steady growth of new exhibits and enhanced marketing strategies at the Nature Center. VINS introduced a new director, created a new Senior Advisor position, re-named all of the campus Centers and revised its marketing philosophy to reflect a more appealing and articulate means of drawing a greater number of visitors to the Nature Center. The extraordinary changes illustrate VINS’ sophisticated and innovative approach to all things education, avian rehabilitation and research.

VINS’ New Leadership

On May 1st of 2014, I took over the helm at the Vermont Institute of Natural Science. As the new Executive Director, I began to make constructive changes, small at first – and eventually culminating in the decision to create an on-campus, professionally designed scientific dinosaur exhibit, with an expected opening in May of 2015. The degree of dedication, attention to detail (small to large), innovation, and knowledge that the VINS Team brought to the planning of this project is merely an illustration of what they bring to VINS on a daily basis.

From devising a new position of Senior Advisor – which allowed VINS to retain the guidance, support and leadership skills of former Interim Executive Director, Judy Callens – to creating eye-catching, vibrant signs displayed on Route 4 to re-imagining the Center for Environmental Education (CEE), Center for Wild Bird Rehabilitation (CWBR), and Center for Environmental Research (CER), the VINS Team moved smoothly and effectively. In addition, Board of Trustee Vice Chair, Maureen Sheldon, set forth the exciting idea of hosting an en Plein Air Painting Festival, connecting artists to nature, in the fall of 2015. The VINS Team’s overall marked, innovative contributions have helped move the organization forward in the public eye, as well as internally, while continually maintaining the authenticity of VINS’ vision and mission of environmental education.

Annual Report

April 1, 2014 ~ March 31, 2015

VINS' Accomplishments

Among VINS' far-reaching and many achievements of 2014 was the 1st Incredible Insect Festival in August, led by VINS' Director of Onsite Interpretation, Chris Collier. Drawing an enormous crowd of over 300 children and adults, the festival presented participants the task of exploring the fascinating and beautiful world of insects. In addition, the planning of a new scientific exhibit was in the works. The daunting task of executing the scientific "Birds are Dinosaurs" exhibit occurred under the direction of Gilles Bussoud, Geology, PhD, Geophysicist, PhD. From the first moment, the project was meticulously thought out, and steps were made to create one of the most professional and scientific exhibits in the history of VINS. The project seamlessly continued its authentic and professional timbre as Chris Collier became the project leader in February of 2015.

The year also marked one of building new partnerships and continuing to grow already established relationships. This year, we began a new partnership with the Montshire Museum of Science in Norwich, VT.

Center for Wild Bird Rehabilitation

In 2014, VINS' Rehabilitation Specialists treated more than 410 birds, culminating in a release rate of approximately thirty-eight percent. During the summer of 2014, Wildlife Services was renamed to the Center for Wild Bird Rehabilitation to better reflect the program's purpose and its new countenance. The expertise and professionalism of the VINS rehabilitation specialists, coupled with the recent renovations of the facility and campus data communications system upgrade, is now effectively conveyed to the public. Visitors, children and adults of all ages, now connected to the avian world by VINS professionals.

Center for Environmental Education

The Naturalist-in-Residence Environmental Education Program continued to soar to unprecedented heights in 2014-2015, as the program took off with eleven participating schools in 2014 and landed the academic year with sixteen participating schools, thus demonstrating a thirty-one percent increase. VINS school programs adopt a science inquiry place-based approach to education and an innovative collaborative partnership with school teachers, allowing for VINS Educators to individually tailor lessons and units for each classroom.

Annual Report

Center for Environmental Education (cont.)

One teacher commented regarding VINS' NiR program: "The educator inspired an enthusiasm in the kids to learn more about the topics....They felt so knowledgeable after each presentation." Another teacher stated, "I can't think of anything I would change, except for having more time." Children connected to science and the environment by the cooperation of teachers and VINS Educators.

VINS Nature Camp

VINS Nature Camp continued to expand in 2014 serving 373 children in over four locations. Our camps continue to educate, inspire and motivate youth to care for the environment, while they gain critical skills of teambuilding and decision-making. In 2014, we are pleased to announce that our numbers remained steady. Although our then-Camp Director Kelly Beerman moved on, we were fortunate to find Sarah Sincerbeaux to join our camp. She has brought marked wisdom, knowledge, ingenuity and passion to the Lead Nature Camp and Adult Education position. We also are grateful to have received grant funding that enabled fifty-nine campers to attend Nature Camp. The Agnes Lindsay Trust, the Donley Foundation, the Horne Family Foundation, and the Thomas Anthony Pappas Foundation continued their generous support of scholarship funding for Nature Camp 2014. Parents continue to laud the benefits of the VINS Nature Camp program: "My son always learns so much about something he already loves...[camp] deepens his passion" and "I liked the variety of activities...They were well-organized and planned perfectly." Children connected to nature through the expertise of VINS Camp Instructors.

Center for Environmental Research (CER)

The Vermont Institute of Natural Science is poised to handle the analysis and synthesis of important research issues that affect the community on local and global scales; develop its research communications processes; begin analyzing relevant findings from applied research and other environmental studies related to our region; and prepare communication on issues of climate change, adaptation, and avian migration among other topics.

Community networks have been established to disseminate information via: VINS educational programs onsite; Social media and electronic communications; Outreach Educational Programs offsite; Adult Education Programs and VINS School Programs; Communities and individuals connected to nature through the sharing of important environmental research and information by VINS Research Staff.

Annual Report April 1, 2014 ~ March 31, 2015

News in Development

This year we have soared to new levels in donor support. We have created the “Soaring Society,” aptly named for individuals and organizations who have risen to great heights in their support of VINS. Donors who have contributed a one time gift of $10,000 or more are recognized for their generous support and are included on a special plaque displayed at the Welcome Center.

On another uplifting note, VINS has flown above and beyond with two very exciting bird releases in 2014 – the release of a bald eagle and a snowy owl. Each release brings us back to the reality that life contains many gifts and these animals, as well as our songbirds and other raptors, symbolize a sense of pride and accomplishment for many – from our volunteers, to our supporters, staff and Board.

Lastly, our ever-popular annual Halloween event, Hoots & Howls, drew a record number of Trick-or-Treaters in 2014 with nearly 350 children and adults. The former evening event transformed into a full day and evening of fun and thrilling festivities, ranging from scary storytelling to dance performances to tours throughout the jack-o-lantern lighted campus – guided by a costumed VINS volunteer. This event aptly illustrates the extraordinary creativity, ingenuity, commitment and expertise of the VINS Staff and volunteers. Generous sponsors of the celebration included A to Z Cakes, Briar Rose Deli at the Quechee Mobil, Cedar Circle Farm, Co-Op Food Stores of NH & VT, Hannaford, Pizza Chef of Quechee, Riverview Farm and Walmart.

We are most grateful to the VINS Board, staff and volunteers, who have helped allow people connect to nature in an unprecedented and exciting way.

Our staff and board are continually inspired by the inquisitive nature of our visitors, children and adults alike, as they discover the wonders of the natural world through the VINS Nature Center. VINS has served as a reliable presence in the region for more than four decades; however, we are always striving to keep all of our programming and facilities modernized and relevant to our mission and audience. It is your support that makes this all possible.

With gratitude and best wishes,

Charles F. Rattigan
Executive Director
