VINS at 50 Years – Looking Back and Forward

Fifty years ago, the founders of VINS pulled the Ottauquechee river out of the mire of pollution, through local engagement and community education. Our stewardship of the 47 acres on which the VINS Nature Center now sits constantly references this history.

Fifty years from now, what will our corner of Vermont look like?

Our place-based environmental education, growing research involvement, and outstanding wildlife hospital will without doubt be rising to the new challenges our changing climate reveals. The loons, eagles, ospreys, and peregrine falcons we helped recover from the brink of extinction have stepped aside to show us the ash trees, monarch butterflies, chimney swifts and bumblebees that still need our help.

At VINS, our mission, to motivate individuals and communities to care for the environment, exists because we envision a resilient, healthy planet, where humans share resources sustainably with natural communities, participate in the stewardship of resources for future use, and maintain scientific literacy to guide decision-making. We see human ways of living as integral parts of a whole ecosystem. Therefore, we have a responsibility to notice the delicate balance of this system, understand how our actions shift the dynamic, and choose to move forward with actions that foster diversity of all kinds.

As a community concerned about the environment, we also realize that these issues are no longer local, but global.

Our votes, the conversations we have with others, and the changes we demand from organizations with resources to make a difference are all critical actions that cannot wait another 50 years to be undertaken.

VINS Celebration

We had the honor and pleasure hosting two of our four co-founders, Sally Laughlin and David Laughlin, presenting the history of VINS on October 15, 2022. It was a compelling day, and we appreciate the many people joining us to learn more about how VINS was founded.

VINS has become a world-class environmental education organization and a sought-after destination for residents and visitors to Vermont and the Upper Valley. We will continue this effort in the many years to come.

VINS Songbird Aviary

For more than a decade, the VINS Nature Center had an aviary to house non-releasable songbirds. From mourning doves and northern cardinals to evening grosbeaks and cedar waxwings, numerous songbirds have been given the opportunity to live out their lives at the Nature Center as ambassadors for their species. Having experienced walk-through aviaries at various locations the VINS staff embarked on researching how to create one of our own.

In the end we designed a 2160 square foot aviary with access to rain and snow or roofed sections to get out of the elements. By comparison, the old aviary was 154 square feet. At its peak the new aviary is 16 feet high allowing birds the chance to sit on the beams above and feel a greater sense of security.

This aviary provides plenty of space for our non-releasable songbirds, a place to discover how important they are in the natural world.

It also provides an opportunity for visitors to learn how they can help birds with simple actions like installing native plants on their land.
A Year of Collaboration for VINS Research

VINS’ research department has many goals, not the least of which is to continue asking questions and learning about the ecological integrity of our campus, our state, and our region.

Our research projects are exciting opportunities to have a positive impact on the natural world through increased understanding.

We strive always to learn, grow, and teach others – and the following research projects are a vital part of that process:

1. The spring season was our second year monitoring American Kestrel populations throughout Vermont and New Hampshire.

2. VINS researchers also continued an exciting and immensely relevant tick monitoring project with a Dartmouth University PhD candidate.

3. We partnered with Dartmouth College professors in a unique research project which focused on the ultrasonic vocalizations of flying squirrels.

4. VINS staff along with the Ottauquechee Natural Resources Conservation District continued to monitor the health of our shared river through water quality sampling at several hotspots along its reach.

5. Late summer included a collaborative project with Hawk Mountain looking at the northward expansion of Black Vultures into Vermont.

6. In the fall we continued to monitor populations of monarchs through tagging and sampling for parasites.

Early Childhood Programs at VINS are Booming!

In a recent early childhood outdoor classroom, children are developing gross motor skills and hand-eye coordination as they toss cloth apples into a basket, while others are practicing letter recognition while matching apple letters on an apple tree. Another group is engrossed in imaginative play with a set of realistic wooden apples which they are counting and pretending to pick from a tree and put in their baskets.

This is an example of the high-quality, original materials that VINS incorporates into our lessons, making VINS’ early childhood programs extremely popular, effective and compelling.

Whether it’s toddlers ‘fishing’ for native species in a shallow bin of water and playing with realistic plush otter puppets, or preschoolers doing an investigation with floating pumpkins, our early childhood programs focus on science, nature, wonder and discovery.

Rehabilitation Challenges Avian Influenza at VINS

In the spring, Highly Pathogenic Avian Influenza (HPAI) swept across the eastern U.S. for the first time in recent history.

Avian influenza is a viral disease found most commonly in waterfowl and other aquatic birds, however it can also affect any bird that is exposed to it. The rehabilitation team at VINS monitored as the disease spread to states nearby and then made its way to Vermont.

Despite the challenges, we recognized a unique opportunity to learn more about this disease and sought to make the most of a difficult situation.

With creativity, hard work and resiliency, the VINS Center for Wild Bird Rehabilitation has remained successful in treating and releasing many birds back to the wild.
VINS is a registered 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization supported by donations, grants, in-school education, field trips, camp, outreach and program fees, memberships, admissions and merchandise sales.
